

WHAT DOES CULTYBRAGGAN MEAN TO YOU?

Cultybraggan Camp is a truly remarkable site, boasting a rich history and a vibrant multi-use community space in the present day. My name is Catriona Davidson, and I am researching the history and heritage of this place for my MSc Heritage dissertation at the University of Stirling. As part of my research, I would like better to understand people's connections with this unique site.

I am seeking individuals familiar with Cultybraggan Camp to participate in individual interviews. No specialist knowledge is required, and if you are interested, I will send you more information in advance of arranging an interview. So, I would love to hear from you, whether you live nearby, frequently pass through the area, spend time locally with loved ones, or have specific associations with the site in terms of activities, memories, or people, we would love to hear from you.

The interviews will be conducted between June and August 2023. If you are over 18 years old and interested in participating, please get in touch with Catriona Davidson at chd00155@students.stir.ac.uk. Please note that participation in this project is voluntary, and no financial compensation will be provided.

The ethical aspects of this project have been approved by the University of Stirling General University Ethics Panel.
